Calvin Howe Abbott.

Calvin Howe Abbott died July 11th at 8 o'clock a. m., at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George G. Abbott, of Auburn, Maine, of a valvular disease of the heart at the age of 81 years, seven months and twenty-nine days.

Mr. Abbott was born in Upton November 18th, 1882, and was the son of Geo. G. and Florence E. (Morse) Abbott. He was educated in the public schools of Norway, where he has always lived with the exception of the first year of his life. By occupation he was a farmer at Norway and for the last six years has been a fire warden and scaler at Bemis. He was a member of the Christian Endeavor Society and in lodge membership belonged to the Oxford Lodge, No. 61, I. O. O. F. Mr. Abbott was loved and respected by all who knew him, always doing to others as he would be done by. The family have lived in Norway nearly 31 years and this is the first bereavement since the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Abbott, who died in 1914. He is survived by his parents, two brothers and three sisters.

The funeral was held Tuesday, July 14th, at his late residence. The Rev. H. L. Nichols, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated. There was singing by Helen Dunn, who sang "Moment by Moment" and "Lord I'm Coming Home." The funeral was attended by the Odd Fellows in a body, also many neighbors and friends, which all went to show how much he was esteemed. The flowers were many and beautiful and included:

32 White Pinks—Father and Mother.
Pillow of pink roses with the word "Brother."
—Brothers and sisters.

Professor Addison Emory Verrill.

Oxford County Boy and Man, Student of Nature, Zoologist and Geologist in Old Yale, Now Visiting His Boyhood Home.

Readers of the Advertiser will read with pleasure of the quiet arrival from New Haven the past week, and visit to the old Maine home, of Prof. A. E. Verrill and Mrs. Flora Louise (Smith) Verrill, since 1865, his beloved and devoted wife. The welcome visitors are at the residence of Clarence W. Smith on Main street, and are in excellent health and fine spirits.

Prof. Verrill is emphatically a "citizen of the world," by his most remarkable history as a worker in some most important fields of Nature's secrets, his coverings of valuable instruments and appliances for facilitating the operations of the scientist, and chiefly, for his contributions to the history of the advancement of science through discovery and development within the past fifty years, whereby hangs a brief but very interesting narrative.

The subject of this sketch was born in Greenwood Feb. 9, 1839, and removed to Norway in 1853. While a student in the Norway schools, even before that time he was making collections of minerals, plants, mammals, birds and reptiles of Maine; also many insects which were all properly classified and named. He prepared for college at Norway Liberal Institute. In his earlier searches (1853-55) he discovered the granite hills of his for minerals in the granite hills of his vicinity he discovered not before known minerals. He first discovered tin ore at Paris, Maine; zircon and corundum in Greenwood; chrysobery in large crystals in Norway; Amazon stones in Waterford, etc.

In 1859 he added several species of flowering plants to the flora of the United States, as recorded in Gray's Botany. His catalogue of the Birds of Norway, published in 1862, was the first general list of the birds of Maine.

He entered the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard, May, 1859, and graduated S. B., 1862. He was an assistant of Prof. Louis Agassiz in the Museum of Comparative Zoology, in charge of mammals, birds and corals, 1860-64, and was curator of Radiata in Boston.

He was appointed professor of Zoology in Yale University, member of the Governing Board of the Sheffield Scientific School, and curator of the Zoological Museum of Yale in 1864. While holding that of Comparative Zoology, he was also professor in the University of Wisconsin, 1867-1870, and in the University of Georgia in the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, 1870-1894.

In 1859 he went to the Island of Grand Manan, N. B., to collect the eggs for the study of the embryos of birds, securing a very large series, as well as numerous skeletons of birds and fishes, for the Museum of Comparative Zoology.

In 1861 he made a zoological and geological exploration of Anticosti Island and the Labrador and published Hyatt and N. S. Shaler and published (1862) reports on the plants, mammals and birds. In this expedition Verrill, Hyatt and Shaler manned the vessel, the schooner "Inlet," with one other man and Capt. Smith. The master, Mr. About and Capt. Smith were obtained, but fifty barrels of fossils were prevented from being fully worked or reported upon.

During nearly every year from 1863 to 1870 he conducted scientific dredging expeditions off the coast of Maine and in the Bay of Fundy.

From 1871 to 1887 he was assistant in charge of the scientific investigations and deep sea dredgings of the U. S. Commissioner of the Fish and Fisheries, under Prof. Spencer F. Baird, commissioner.

This involved the explorations of sea bottom from the shore to depths of over 2,000 fathoms beneath the "Gulf Stream," thus obtaining vast collections of marine animals, very many of them entirely new to science. In connection with these explorations, Prof. Verrill invented several new forms of apparatus for obtaining deep sea animals, which have been of great value to the use of fishermen, particularly for oyster fishermen for destroying star fishes on the oyster beds.

From 1872 to 1880 he made a special study of the gigantic cephalopods or "devil fishes," especially those of New England. Many more specimens were obtained than had been previously known. A large life size model of a specimen about fifty-two feet long was constructed; also a large model of the California Octopus. Duplicates of these are now exhibited in many large museums in this country and in Europe.

Prof. Verrill contributed all the zoological and most of the paleontological matter and supervised the engravings for Webster's International Dictionary. Besides this technical literary work he has given many lectures on his favorite subjects, including two courses at the Lowell Institute in Boston. In 1898 to 1901 he conducted very successful scientific expeditions to the Bermudas, obtaining large collections illustrating the land and marine fauna, complete series of the corals, including very complete series of the corals, crinoids, crustacea, mollusca and other animals of the Bermuda coral reefs, with numerous colored drawings and photographs from life.

Since 1888 he has spent his summer vacations with his family at the Thimble Islands off Bradford, Conn., where he has a summer residence. Since 1863, Prof. Verrill has published many important original investigations on the Invertebrates of the entire Atlantic and Pacific coasts of North and South America, especially of the Atlantic deep sea fauna. He has also published reports on the Zoology of the East Indies, Japan, New Zealand, Hawaiian Islands, etc., especially on the corals and actinia. The valuable zoological collections of the Museum of Yale University efforts, under most difficult personal circumstances, and with very meager funds.

He received the honorary degree of A. M. from Yale in 1867, was elected member of the National Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1873. He is also a member of the Boston Society of Natural History, the American Academy of Arts and

NUMBER 30.

Professor Addison Emory Verrill.

Oxford County Boy and Man, Student of Nature, Zoologist and Geologist in Old Yale, Now Visiting His Boyhood Home.

Readers of the Advertiser will read with pleasure of the quiet arrival from New Haven the past week and visit to the old Maine home of Prof. A. E. Verrill and Mrs. Flora Louise (Smith) Verrill, since 1865, his beloved and devoted wife. The welcome visitors are at the residence of Clarence W. Smith on Main street, and are in excellent health and fine spirits.

Prof. Verrill is emphatically a "citizen of the world," by his most remarkable history as a worker in some of the most important fields of Natural Science, his discoveries of many of Nature's secrets, his inventions of valuable instruments and appliances for facilitating the operations of the scientist, and chiefly, for his contributions to the history of the advancement of scientific discovery and development within the past fifty-five years, whereby hangs a brief but very interesting narrative.

The subject of this sketch was born in Greenwood Feb. 9, 1839, and removed to Norway in 1853. While a student in the Norway schools, even before that time he was making collections of minerals, plants, mammals, birds and reptiles of the area; also many insects which were all properly classified and named. He prepared for college at Norway Liberal Institute. In his earlier searches (1855-55) for minerals in the granite hills of his vicinity he discovered and identified a number of rare minerals not before known in Maine. He first discovered them at Paris, Maine; zircon and corundum in Greenwood; chrysoberyl in large crystals in Norway; Amazon stones in Waterford, etc.

In 1859, he added several species of flowering plants to the flora of the United States, as recorded in Gray's Botany. His catalogue of the Birds of Norway, published in 1862, was the first general list of the birds of Maine.

He entered the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard, May, 1859, and graduated S. B., 1863. He was an assistant in the Department of Geology in the Museum of Comparative Zoology, in charge of mammals, birds and corals, 1860-64, and was curator of Radiata in Boston Society of Natural History, 1864-74. He was appointed professor of Zoology in Yale University, member of the Governing Board of the Sheffield Scientific School, and curator of the Zoological Museum of Yale in 1864. While holding that professorship, he was also professor of Comparative Anatomy and Entomology in the University of Wisconsin, 1867-1870.

His researches in Geology in the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale, 1870-1894. In 1859 he went to the Island of Grand Mann, N. B., to collect the eggs for the sake of the embryos of sea birds, securing a very large series (about 1,200) of several species, as well as numerous skeletons of birds and fishes, for the Museum of Comparative Zoology.

In 1861 he made a zoological and geological exploration of Anticosti Island and the Labrador Coast with Alpheus Hyatt and N. S. Shaler and published (1863) reports on the plants, mammals and birds. In this expedition Verrill, Hyatt and Shaler named the vessel, the schooner "Inlet," with one other man and Capt. Small, the master. About fifty barrels of fossils were obtained, but the on-coming Civil War prevented their being fully worked or reported upon.

During nearly every year from 1863 to 1870 he conducted scientific dredging expeditions off the coast of Maine and in the Bay of Fundy. From 1871 to 1887 he was assistant in charge of the scientific investigations and deep sea dredgings of the U. S. Commissioner of the Fish and Fisheries, under Prof. Spencer F. Baird, commissioner.

This involved the explorations of the sea bottom from Newfoundland to Cape Haitiras, and from the shore to depths of over 2,600 fathoms beneath the "Gulf stream," thus obtaining vast collections of marine animals, very many of them entirely new to science. In connection with these explorations, Prof. Verrill invented several new forms of apparatus for obtaining deep sea animals, which have been very valuable for the use of fishermen, particularly for oyster fishermen for destroying star fishes on the oyster beds.

From 1872 to 1880 he made a special study of the gigantic cephalopods or "devil fishes," especially those of Newfoundland. Many more specimens were obtained than had been previously known. A large life size model of a specimen about fifty-two feet long was constructed, also a large model of the California Octopus. Duplicates of these are now exhibited in many large museums in this country and in Europe.

Prof. Verrill contributed all the zoological and most of the paleontological matter and supervised the engravings for Webster's International Dictionary. Besides this technical literary work he has given many lectures on his favorite subjects, including two courses at the Lowell Institute in Boston. In 1898 to 1901 he conducted very successful scientific expeditions to the Bermudas, obtaining large collections illustrating the land and marine fauna, and the geology, including very complete series of the corals, gordinas, crustacea, mollusca and other animals of the Bermuda coral reefs, with numerous colored drawings and photographs from life.

Since 1888 he has spent his summer vacations with his family at the Thimble Islands off Branford, Conn., where he has a summer residence. Since 1893, Prof. Verrill has published many important original investigations on the Laveretia of the entire Atlantic and Pacific Coasts of North and South America, especially of the Atlantic deep sea fauna. He has also published reports on the Zoology of the East Indies, Japan, New Zealand, Hawaiian Islands, etc., especially on the corals and actinia. The valuable zoological collections of the Museum of Yale University are due almost entirely to his personal efforts, under most discouraging circumstances, and with very meager funds.

He received the honorary degree of A. M. from Yale in 1867, was elected member of the National Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1872. Is also a member of the Boston Society of Natural History, the American Academy of Arts and Science; the Connecticut Academy of Arts and Sciences; the Wisconsin Academy of Science; Essex Institute; New York Academy of Sciences; Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences; Zoological Society of France and many other societies. He has been Associate Editor of the American Journal of Science from 1869 to 1899.

His contributions to the Journal and to the transactions and proceedings of the various Scientific Societies amount to over 300 papers, mostly on zoological and geological subjects. They have been collected (1904) in 12 volumes, reports on the Cephalopods (1880-1889) form a complete monographic treatise describing all species known on our coast. He published the following works in 1903:

The Bermuda Islands: Scenery, Climate, Productions, Physiography, Natural History, Geology, etc., 558 pages, fully illustrated. Zoology of the Bermudas, Vol. 1, 427 pages, illustrated.

Mr. Verrill has discovered and described over one hundred and fifty new genera and several hundreds of new species, begetting to a great variety of groups. His other contributions to the knowledge of Natural Science are sufficiently strange and novel to crown him as perhaps one of the greatest of all modern investigators in his chosen sphere of original investigation.

Prof. Verrill is the second son of George Washington and Lucy Hilborn Verrill, and from an ancestry including some of the earliest settled families (1629-1700) of Salem, Gloucester and Beverly, Mass., and has connections with many honorable families in other states. Mr. Verrill was married June 15, 1865, to Flora Louise, daughter of Elliot and Levia Howard (Barton) Smith of Norway. She is a sister of Prof. Sidney I. Smith of Yale University, and of Clarence M. Smith of Norway.

Prof. Verrill's latest book is a Monograph of the Starfishes of the Pacific Coast of America in two volumes with 110 plates, published by the Smithsonian Institution, 1914. He is now printing an extensive work on deep sea corals in two quarto volumes, with 160 plates, partly colored.

This hastily written biographical sketch is recognition of a modest son of Norway, who, more than fifty years ago left his paternal home to join the great fraternity of workers in many fields of scholarly efforts and having toiled diligently until the evening of life, now comes home again bringing abundant sheaves of his faithful labors and deserved reward.

IT'S A MISTAKE

Made by Norway Residents.

Many people in a misguided effort to get rid of kidney backache, rely on plaster, liniments and other makeshifts. The right treatment is kidney treatment and a remarkably recommended kidney medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills. Norway is no exception.

The proof is at your very door. The following is an experience typical of the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Norway.

"Doan's Kidney Pills are the only kidney medicine I use and they always give me relief," says W. O. Needham, retired farmer, of Main St., Norway. "Several years ago I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and I began using them. They got my kidneys working right and when that was done, the uric poison in my system was removed. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Stone's Drug Store and I know that they can be relied on."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Needham had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Fairy Footsteps.

Away to the woodland I wandered
One pleasant summer day
Where the fern and the wild-flowers grew
And where the fairies stay.
And as I sat idly musing,
At the foot of an oak tree tall,
With birds and flowers and breeze,
And the green arch over all,
I fell to thinking of fairies,
As in childhood, long ago,
When I used to list to the legends
And think they were truly so.
A happy little fairy was real,
That would linger in fancy through the day.
And appear in my dreams at night.
And somehow the breath of the forest
With the sound of a rippling stream,
Wrought for me a spell of music.
Half real and half a dream.

And I was in a fairy castle
With shining towers to dome,
Of clearest crystal and rubies bright,
As if they were of fairy-home.
And I looked and the cups of the acorn
Turned to fairy cups of gold.
And from them they sipped their nectar
In the days of olden lore.
And all was joy and gladness
So merry they seemed to be
As they romped about me.
And returned again to me.
'Twas thus I sat enraptured
With this happy fairy band—
At last I had to leave the land—
I had found the fairy land.

Then the voice of a woodland robin
Thrilled forth to loud and clear
I awoke, and found I'd been dreaming
In vain I have tried to recall them,
Yet I catch but a glimpse as through a
My of fairy paradise.

Gone are the woodland fairies,
And the days of olden lore;
And the fancies of my childhood
Have never returned to me.

JENNIE E. SNOW KIMBALL.
Whittier's Prayer.

A favorite poem of the late Hiram Howe.
When on my days of life the night is falling,
And the wind from unseen spaces blows,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling,
And I feel peace and comfort in their throes.
Thou who hast made my home in life so pleasant,
Leave not the tenant when its walls decay,
O love divine and spirit ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay.
Be with me when I drift from me drifting,
Earth, sky, home pictures, days of shade
And shine,
And kindly face to thy own uplifting
The love that answers mine.
I thank thee, O Father,
Let Thy spirit be near to comfort and uphold;
No gem of pearl, no jeweled crown I merit,
No street of shining gold.
Surfice it if my good will be unceasing,
And these forgiven through Thy unbounding grace
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.
There from the music round about the stealing
ing,
I faint would learn the new and holy song,
And at last beneath thy trees of healing
The life for which I long.

RUMFORD.
Mrs. Robert H. Lincoln, avenue, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Record, of Lewiston, has returned home. Mrs. J. A. Garneau is at Old Orchard beach for a few weeks.

Mrs. John E. Stephens and children are at their home in Canton.
William Bicknell of Norway has been in town, recently, as a guest of his brother, B. B. Bicknell.

Charles E. Richardson, a student of Wesleyan University, is home for the summer vacation.
William and Madeline Brennick of Cambridge, Mass., are visiting their aunt, Mrs. John Brennick.

Mrs. Samuel Turner of Portland, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. E. A. Wakely, has returned home.
Mr. Arthur of Hallowell is visiting at F. F. Bartlett's.

Maine Auto Road Book.
The Maine Automobile Road Book of 1914 has just been issued and without doubt is the finest automobile guide of the Pine Tree State that has ever been gotten out. The book has been in preparation for one year, during which time the Association's pathfinding cars have covered practically every important highway from Houlton to the Atlantic Ocean, and from New Brunswick to New Hampshire. The routes covering practically all of New Hampshire, as well as the through routes of travel from Boston to Portland and from the Massachusetts capital to the mountain resorts of the Granite State.

Among the best features of the 1914 edition are three new maps—specially prepared for this book. These include a general map of the State, a road map covering every principal automobile road within the State of Maine as well as the greater part of New Hampshire. There is also a sportsmen's map showing all of the great sporting regions of the State.

A third map printed in three colors, of the Pine Tree State, which this year is again a feature of this book. The Pine Tree Tour is designated to cover all principal points of interest in the southern and western half of the State most visited by tourists, and is a definite trip outlined from start to finish so that one may go over it and visit these places without the necessity of mapping out the trip in advance or worrying over details.

This year's book has 352 pages and in addition to the routes contains a special prepared digest of the Maine automobile law, the Maine fish and game laws. Owing to the great cost of the book this year, and the fact that it is a bound volume, it will be necessary to make a preparation, partially to cover the cost of preparation. The book, however, will be given free to members of the Maine Association, to all automobile associations, information bureaus, newspapers, etc., upon request, by addressing the Touring Information Bureau, 12 Monument Square, Portland. One can be seen at this office.

RUMFORD CORNER.
Soap Club Entertained.
Mrs. Mabel Worcester entertained the members of the Soap Club last week, each member inviting one visitor. Each one was asked to bring a picture of themselves unknown to the others. The original of the picture to be guessed by the others. Mrs. Ada Hittsall guessed all and received the first prize of a very pretty rose bowl.

After refreshments of ice cream and cake, all went home, glad there was a Soap Club of ten members.

Road Improvement.

Work is now in progress by the State Highway Department on the main highway leading from the White Mountain resorts through North Conway, N. H., and Fryeburg, Maine, to Bridgton, Portland and Poland Spring. The work has been started at the New Hampshire line, just west of Fryeburg, and is being carried on toward Bridgton, through Fryeburg village, about seven miles of splendid new highway is being constructed.

While this work is in progress, automobile traffic should take the following excellent detours, which have been laid out by the Maine Automobile Association.

Fresh Tobacco Never Bites; Dry, Cut-up Tobacco Does

Only when the natural moisture dries out of tobacco can a "bite" get into it. In the Sickle plug, all the moisture, flavor and fragrance are pressed in and kept in by the natural leaf wrapper. Every pipeful you whittle off the plug is fresh—so you always get a slow-burning, cool, sweet, satisfying smoke.

If you want your tobacco already cut up for you, in packages, you have to be content with dry tobacco, that burns fast and hot, and bites your tongue.

That's why experienced smokers cut up their own tobacco, from the Sickle plug. They get more tobacco, because they don't pay for a package—and better tobacco, because it's always fresh.

WHY WEAK LUNGS?

The toll of tuberculosis is claiming more than 350 victims every day in the United States, yet few realize their grave condition until the critical period arrives. Overwork, worry, weakness after sickness, catarrh, bronchitis, tender throats—all exert the weakening influence that invites consumption.
 To guard against consumption, thousands of people take Scott's Emulsion after meals because its rich medicinal nourishment strengthens the lungs, puts vigor in the blood, and rebuilds strength to resist tuberculosis. Scott's Emulsion is nature's strength-builder. Refuse substitutes.

MAKES BACKACHE QUICKLY DISAPPEAR

A Few Doses Relieves All Such Miseries. Bladder Weakness, Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism Promptly Vanish

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with backache, kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders to contend with, or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints, and its heart-wrenching pains, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely relieves all such troubles.

Croxone is the most wonderful remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It is not like anything else ever used for the purpose. It acts on the principle of cleaning out the poisons and removing the cause.

It soaks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, like water in a sponge, neutralizes, dissolves, and makes the kidneys sift out and filter away, all the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, the very principle of Croxone is such, that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it.

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder trouble, or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired, and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone will quickly relieve you of your misery. You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

Mosquitoes.

If the little sharp tongue insects are making night hideous about your dwelling, look the premises over carefully and if you find anything, even as small as a tea-cup with water in it empty it. If it is too big to be emptied, pour enough kerosene, 1/2 a cup full to a barrel, over the top and that will kill the mosquitoes and then no more mosquitoes. This is ancient history but still one finds mosquito breeding cans and barrels about the back yards. People owe this not only to themselves but to their neighbors.
 Of course this will do no good near stagnant bodies of water, but for dwelling two hundred yards away it is sure.

HUDSON Six-40 for 1915

New Price $1,550 F. O. B. Detroit.

The 1915 Gem

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 offers 32 surprises. Last year it seemed that no car could be better. And it seemed that quality cars could never sell lower.

But the HUDSON engineers—headed by Howard E. Coffin—have brought out 31 new features. And a trebled output—due to overwhelming demand—will reduce the price $200.

This light Six is lighter than ever. It is handsomer—better-equipped. Just think—48 engineers, for one whole year, have worked exclusively on refinements. Yet the price—which was never approached in a quality car—has been lowered by $200.

You will find in this new model the jewel car of the year—the final ideal in a Six. You will find many attractions shown in no other car. And at a price which no one considered possible until Hudson made it possible.

Willing Workers.

One of the pleasant mid summer events of the season was given by Mrs. Quimby Perham at her delightful home on Thursday, the 16th, to the ladies of the Willing Workers, of which she is a member.

An entertainment of readings and music was much enjoyed. A fine piano selection was given by Mildred Perham, and following the entertainment a social was in order after which the ladies were invited to the dining room where a dainty lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter. Toasts were given, also a vote of thanks to Mrs. Perham for her kind hospitality.

Those present were Mary Andrews, Ethel Wood, Martha L. Barrett, Jessie Andrews, Katy Cash, Gertrude Andrews, Annie Davis, Ellen Hammon and Miss Hilton. The guests were Mrs. Stover, Mrs. Felt, Mrs. Eva Titus, Mrs. Ansel Dudley, Mr. Perham and Mr. Whitman. Also the hostess and her daughter, Mildred.

Punch and chocolate were served during the afternoon Mrs. Perham presented the Circle with a puff ready to be tackled, but owing to the very warm afternoon, it was decided not to work so the work will be taken up at the next meeting.

A very pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all.

Annual Fair and Ball.

The annual fair and ball of the Village Improvement Society, will be held at Dudley Opera House, July 29th and 30th. On the evening of the 29th there will be a sale, with the usual attractive booths, where you can purchase almost any article especially in the fancywork line, at good bargains. There will also be a short program and entertainment.

On the evening of July 30, is the ball with music by Shaw's Orchestra of South Paris, and the usual good time is expected.

The Village Improvement Society is holding this fair and ball for the purpose of raising funds to extend the sidewalk system. It means lots of hard work on the part of the committee, and others to get up a fair, as only those who have taken part in such undertakings can realize and it is to be hoped that everyone interested in the welfare of our beautiful little village will do what they can to make the affair a grand success and encourage the Society in the fine work they are doing for us. Contributions will be gratefully received either of money or any little article that will sell. Mrs. Ned L. Swan and Mrs. H. Alton Bacon are among the members of the committee in charge of the fair.

Every undertaking of this kind carried to successful completion means much, not only to our village alone, but to the whole of our good old town of Woodstock. Let us give one mighty pull together and make this the best and most successful fair the Society has ever held. It is up to us. Let's do it.

The White Mountains and the Preservation of their Forests.

ELEANOR F. KNEELAND of Waterford

In the northern part of the state of New Hampshire lies a range of mountains stretching away toward the icy shores of Greenland in the northeast and toward those warmer climes of Australia and the far distant continent in the southwest. As from a distance our eyes rest upon these mountains we behold snow capped peaks which seem to meet the azure of the sky above. Yet as we gaze, little do we realize what these peaks mean to us. This range of two hundred mountains covers about thirteen hundred square miles of territory and is classed as one of the most beautiful features of all New England.

In exploring this range we would find just below those snowy summits beautiful ravines and wild gorges, the rugged slopes away to meet the wooded section above. Here, perhaps a tiny mountain stream or even a bubbling spring, whose water trickles down over the granite sides of the gorge making an effect picture upon one of the highest peaks, one sees in the distance the city of Portland and that expanse of the Atlantic Ocean known as Casco Bay. A little nearer appears the blue waters of Sebago. Then looking directly below about three hundred feet to the left the eye discerns a deep gulf. Its sides are covered with dark green trees, and there at the bottom of the gulf glistens a tiny blue lake all quiet in the sunlight. Yet, let us gaze from another point on the same peak. What now do we see? Lo, a barren waste. We are disappointed and we ask ourselves what means this desert place in these mountains, the most refined works of all nature. Indeed, the solution is easy; it is the lumberman's axe and the dreadful forest fire.

These beautiful mountains form the great water shed of New England. From them flow five of New England's principal rivers, the Connecticut, the Merrimac, the Saco, the Androscoggin and the Kennebec. On these streams are the greatest cotton, woolen and paper mills in New England and the largest in the world. They abound in water power, both developed and undeveloped.

Upon these water powers New England's manufacturers chiefly depend. They are the foundations and the source of her greatest wealth. Without coal, and far distant from the coal beds, cheap water power has enabled New England to maintain her industrial position against the competition of more favored localities.

A considerable amount of power, on the several rivers is used in the generation of electricity. In this respect, water power in the future is likely to become more important than in the past. With electric power transmission, factories need no longer be in an inconvenient place at the water fall where market and transportation facilities are both absent. It permits the development of power high up in the mountains at points formerly regarded as inaccessible. If the coal fields should ever become exhausted, as it is claimed that they may, water power will become still more valuable as a source of light, heat and power.

Each of these five rivers have their share of New England's largest factories situated at the most advantageous places along the stream.

The Connecticut river rises at the extreme northern portion of New Hampshire, within half a mile of the Canadian border and flows south for about three hundred miles to Long Island Sound. It forms the boundary between New Hampshire and Vermont for one hundred and thirty miles and for one hundred and twenty-five miles traverses Massachusetts and Connecticut. On the Connecticut river, including its tributaries, which abound in water power, two thousand, two hundred and ninety-eight mills of all kinds had been erected in 1880. Now there are many more. In the northern Connecticut valleys, however, is the principal industry. At McIndoe Falls alone about twelve million board feet are saved annually.

Likewise the Merrimac plays a most important part in the New England industrial success. It is said that this river is the most developed water power stream in the world. The main stream is formed by the union of the Pennesseewassee and the Winnepesaukee rivers. Its greatest powers are noted at Manchester, New Hampshire, at Lawrence and Lowell, Mass., while the power of the Winnepesaukee at Franklin before it joins the Pennesseewassee is scarcely second to the power on the main stream. On the tributaries of the Merrimac, as of the Connecticut there the valuable water privileges. The articles manufactured on the water power of the Merrimac are somewhat less varied than those on the Connecticut being chiefly cotton goods. However, the investment of capital is large, estimated to be about fifteen million dollars at Lawrence with a greater amount at Lowell, and a somewhat smaller amount at Manchester. The total amount of capital invested upon this river is one hundred million dollars, much having been spent in constructing canals and in improvements of that sort.

In the same way, upon the Saco river there are great opportunities for developing the water power. At one place the river falls seventy-two feet within a distance of nine hundred feet. But the power is little used. It is not likely that many will establish factories on this river until the effect of the logging operation in the mountains is more clearly demonstrated.

It seems hardly necessary to explain the great importance of the Androscoggin. We all know the great influence of this river. Here are mills furnishing employment to hundreds of people. Rumford Falls, Brunswick, Lewiston and Livermore Falls, besides intervening points extensive use is made of the water power. The range of manufactures is wide including paper mills, cotton mills, electric plants, saw mills, grist mills and wool working factories. The possibilities of the Androscoggin are many. It already has world wide fame for its manufactures dependent upon its stream flow.

On the Kennebec river, the power afforded by storage of water power in Moosehead lake is very great. This lake forms a large reservoir scarcely equaled by any other except the Great Lakes. The principle water powers are utilized in the manufacture of woolen goods and paper pulp. Also a great deal is used in the development of electric plants.

Here in the valleys of these beautiful rivers, much agriculture is carried on. One would see it if they could be a winged bird flying over these valleys, beautiful green fields, which produce the farm products that go to feed the multitude in the great cities. Thus we find that the mountains not only influence manufacturing through their rivers but also the agricultural productions upon which so much depends.

Here to the green valleys and massive peaks many hundred people come each year. These people come to enjoy the beauty of these particularly lovely features of nature. Some of America's most noted men and women have visited these mountains. Mt. Cleveland, standing in the town of Bethlehem derives its name from the late President Cleveland who loved his quiet mountain home at Ramoth. Likewise Mt. Hale is named for the Edward Everett Hale who is known and visited these mountains, since the time, when as a young man he helped survey them more than sixty years ago.

Thus it is easily seen what the mountains have to do with the success of New Hampshire and of all New England. But there is something that makes it possible for these mountains to send forth mighty streams and to attract hundreds of people to the surrounding regions by their beauty. It is indeed their forests. Those tall primeval pine trees, the thick set spruce, the tall slender hardwood, these alone, my friends, render the mountains valuable. The forests keep the water in the soil. Their roots hold the soil firm which prevents soil from rolling down the mountain sides in great land slides. Lastly they cover the rocky peaks, making them beautiful instead of rough and desolate.

Therefore, with so much at stake, the mountain forests should be carefully preserved. The forests on the high peaks are of particular value because their protection to stream flow. When they have been cut over the earth freezes in the fall forcing the melting snows off in torrents in March and April, and giving corresponding low waters in July and August. On the other hand, under the heavy forests the ground seldom freezes. The snow melts late in the spring lasting sometimes into June. The water percolates slowly through the soil into the springs and brooks. Mr. Pinchew, our National Forester, tells us that a protected mountain soil will hold back five times its own weight of water. How vast is this power. How important to manufacturers and navigation on the great rivers below. Also to agriculture in their valleys. The floods carry silt and stones that obstruct the channels of the rivers requiring large expenditures upon the harbors to keep them open. Floods carry down silt and stones that cover up fertile fields often destroying farms and buildings. Would it not be much better and vastly cheaper to protect the source of the stream and keep the silt where nature first placed it?

The high slopes are slashed over in a manner so mercilessly wasteful that from one-third to two-thirds of all the trees are left upon the ground. All of the smaller ones are left to rot and decay, cut merely to remove the larger ones. This debris invites fire which almost always follows, consuming even the entire ground with a large part of the vegetable material. These fires often cause landslides, which destroy much property, the bending roots having been loosened by the fire. It takes a forest on the high slopes from one to two centuries to recover a successful growth after a fire. The rate of cutting is excessive, owing to the unprotected demand for paper pulp to supply the great newspapers. Three hundred acres, daily and about thirty thousand annually are cut over. While this is going on we are told plainly by the "Forest Service" at Washington that the hardwood in this country, in which the White Mountains abound, will be gone in fifteen years, and that in thirty-five years the timber famine with which we are now threatened will have reached a climax.

The evil effects of forest destruction are prominently marked in the older Asiatic and European countries where the pressure of population upon the wood supply has consumed the mountain forests. France is now spending extraordinary sums in an effort to reforest denuded mountain sides, even going so far as to construct walls of masonry to hold back the soil. In cutting a mountain forest few individuals and fewer corporations feel that their work makes any difference. They do not realize that nature is slowly wearing the mountains down to the sea and that the forests are the chief barrier.

Thus we see much depends upon these mountain forests.

WEST PARIS.

Henry B. Dunham.
Henry B. Dunham died at the home of his step-son, Alton Day, early last Friday morning.
Mr. Dunham was the last surviving child of Samuel B. and Mariah Dunham of Woodstock, and was born March 5, 1838. His boyhood days were spent in this vicinity. He attended the common schools and Hebron Academy, and afterwards taught school.
He married Ruth Curtis of Woodstock and soon after went to Chelsea, Mass., where he was in business relations, first with the express company of Curtis, Pratt & Dunham, then with his cousin, Samuel W. Dunham, now of West Paris, and later in the Produce Exchange in Charlestown.
After about fifty years of active business in Chelsea, he retired, and moved back to West Paris, eight years ago, where he has worked in Mann's mill most of the time until last October, he gave up work altogether, except about his home and on the farm with Alton Day, after his removal to their home this spring. He was sick only a few days of no special disease except a general break down which comes of old age.
While in Chelsea he was connected with the town business as a member of the Common Council and also a member of the Co. of Veteran Firemen. He belonged to three different lodges, the Knights of Pythias, the A. O. U. W. and the Redmen.
They had three children, George H., and Frank E. Dunham of Chelsea, Mass., and Mrs. Flora Dunham Wilder, of Brookline, Mass., all of whom survive.
Mrs. Dunham died when Mrs. Wilder was a small child and Mr. Dunham married Mrs. Martha Powers Day who also survives him.
Mr. Dunham was a kind, thoughtful husband and father and an honest, pleasant, unassuming friend and neighbor.
The funeral was held in the Universalist church, Sunday, at 2 p. m., Rev. D. A. Ball officiating. Interment in West Paris cemetery beside his first wife.
The benefit food sale and ball given at Centennial Hall last week for the family of Elmer E. Tuell, was well patronized and over $50 was cleared as an expression of sympathy toward them. Mr. Tuell moved from here to Walpole, Mass., about four years ago and they have been unfortunate in sickness the greater part of the time, but all seems trivial beside this last great trouble. Mr. Tuell's sickness in which his mind became impaired so that at present he is being cared for in the insane hospital.
A most delicious strawberry supper was held in the Grange Hall, Saturday evening for the benefit of the Grange, but not being very well advanced, there was not a very large attendance.

Mrs. Daniel Churchill is in very poor health.

Mrs. Frances Dunham of Sumner is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Bert Day.
After next Sunday the Universalist church will be closed for the month of August. Rev. D. A. Ball will take that month for a vacation during the Universalist Convention meetings at Ferry Beach as has been his custom on previous years.

Frank P. McKenny is boarding at Sam Johnson's.

Mrs. Martha Dunham is visiting in Portland and Dayton.

Mrs. Nelson, the State Bible Missionary, finished her work here and went to West Sumner, Wednesday.

Rev. E. A. Davis called on a few friends here on Monday, while on his way to W. O. Bryant's where Mrs. Davis was for a few days before going to their home in Lewiston.

Seth Marston has returned from Ohio where he has been for the past winter and spring.

Mrs. Nellie Moody went to Norway, Tuesday, for a few days, to help Mrs. Georgia Estes, whose mother, Mrs. Ryerson, is very ill.

Leon Berry of Lisbon was home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Berry, over Sunday. He expects soon to be sent to Upper Dam House to install a furnace and bath room fittings.

Minnie Stevens recently bought a pig of Eldren Stearns.
Mr. and Mrs. Vernal Bates of New Haven, Conn., have been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Bates, on their way to their camp at Little Pond.

Mrs. W. E. Penley, who has been very poorly for two or three weeks past, was taken worse this week and has a trained nurse, who came Tuesday night.

C. H. Lane has closed the original front entrance to his store and put in a plate glass window in the place and has an entrance made across the corner facing the corner of Main and Church streets where he has arranged to avoid the long flight of steps which makes it much easier for his customers to enter. The foundations are also laid by his store and staked on by the next store for a new cement sidewalk which is expected to extend to the railroad, also some crossings put in where needed.

White Satin Bread

STILL STANDS THE TEST

Not only of the New York experts, but of the LOCAL GOOD JUDGES of the best in bread

Several cases have come to our notice in the last few days. Here is one:—

One prominent Grocer of Norway, a dealer in White Satin Bread exclusively, having friends to tea, decided to test the merits of WHITE SATIN BREAD against one other much advertised bread, furnished him by a fellow Grocer.

His company were asked to select the bread most pleasing to them. White Satin Bread STOOD THE TEST, it was declared THE BEST, by the company present.

This Grocer is a firm believer in supporting home products, when backed by such quality as WHITE SATIN BREAD, and by so doing, is daily adding new Customers to his list of satisfied bread buyers.

As to the comparative freshness of the different breads on this market, compare distances running time from points of shipment, with one half hour from our oven to your table, and you have the result. There is no disputing this point. We say Do not buy Stale bread, insist on your Grocer furnishing it strictly fresh. That means

"WATER BRIGHT."

One should speak timely on the subject of water unless a chemist or a laboratory physician. But water is a food from more than one way of defining it. It is indigestible or digestible. It is broken down to be built up into tissues, which is in turn made up of cells and water and is the chief constituent of every one of our millions and billions of cells.

Being a food we have a right to consider it from the economic standpoint. People who have how to make the right use of water need far less food than one standpoint but extravagantly from another, we drink a good deal more than half the water we need in the system unless we are great tilters.

One fortunate side of this is that water from foods is distilled, flavored and mineralized, except for the part we add in cooking and this is in most cases boiled, and so is safe. People who are regular eaters get a pretty regular amount of water but there are a great many people who are priding themselves on not being very regular eaters in the summer at just the time when they need the most water. If they eat little they need to drink more.

Though a man fast, he must have water to drink. Anybody knows that water is constantly given up by the system and ought to know that it must constantly be replenished. If you are sick and cannot eat as carefully over the liquids you take, if she is a good nurse, as over the medicines. In fact, the liquids are very often medicinal. If you are well you ought to obtain some of the same precision in the matter. One fraction of an intelligent you give to eating ought to be devoted to drinking not only to just the right sort of water but to drinking just enough and neither more or less.

A great deal must be taken in certain kinds of illness to wash out the system and much less in others. With a tendency to have these same diseases a great deal of water may prevent them. Stout people must not drink too much water, or if they drink must not take it at meal time so that the digestive juices are diluted and the food is not thoroughly taken care of and promptly, but in this matter it makes a difference as to what is causing their tendency to obesity.

As to other people the best authorities now say drink somewhat at meals. Drink water between meals to keep up the action of the stomach or to supply the extra amount needed because of doing hard work or eating less food. A glass or two of water before bedtime is recommended for almost everybody as well as one on first rising in the morning.

We get more than a quart of water from our foods and we need about a quart more, or perhaps two quarts in summer when a man may throw off enough water playing a game of tennis to reduce his weight two pounds. If he is a foolish man he puts it right back by drinking too much water on the spot which amount will press on his stomach and induce that condition which we call water logged. If this water is very cold it will require the expenditure of a good deal of bodily energy to heat it, and this energy results in heating the whole body as well. In the hottest countries cold water is intolerable on this account. Ice which is eaten more slowly can be taken.

Those who know how much the health may be injured by careless water drinking say that drinking too much or too little may cause a great deal of trouble. Drinking too much is declared to degenerate into an evil habit, "with all its baneful effects on the heart and circulation by supplying a plethora of watery elements and on nutrition by retarding its progress and leading to obesity." The proper proportion for the healthy individual can be found just as one can find, by keeping strict account, how much money they can spend. It does not take long to establish a right regimen, because we are all creatures of habit and very greatly so in the matter of food and eating. Anyone who will take water—it may be acidulated and the right times can soon regulate the amount needed, beside.

Water stimulates the appetite. It may also keep a man from eating too much if he is sensible. Intelligence about the matter will save our natural regulator a great deal of labor and ward off the troubles that come because it is so frequently overworked.

The Works of the Lightning.

During the heavy thunder storm on Friday evening, July 17th, the lightning struck the home of Charles Philbrook, doing some damage. The lightning entered the attic through the roof, traveling through an upper chamber where it ripped one of the bed posts in several places, destroyed a mirror and several pictures. From there the bolt traveled down into the cellar where it tore all the plaster off the wall, besides breaking the handle on a saw.

When Mr. Philbrick heard the crash of thunder, he jumped out of his chair, thinking the barn was hit. Reaching forward his hand touched a severe shock, causing which received a severe shock, falling limply to his side. It was nearly an hour before the strength returned to his arm. Educating the Child.

There are some educators and mothers that advocate of careful training of the artistic perception who say that a child's room should never contain more than one picture—but that this one picture should be frequently changed. This child should be allowed to become familiar with all its good points and to grow fond of it before it is taken away. Then it should be changed for another picture equally good. It does not matter how inexpensive the copy of the picture may be, provided the tone and light and shade values are faithfully produced, and many copies of famous pictures out from magazines and newspaper supplements are as well produced as any mother might train her child to recognize the great paintings of the world by pinning inexpensive reproductions of them on the child's wall.

If she desires to she might pin up three or four at a time. The summer cottage plan is all right, but many pictures are confusing and the eyes, because there is so much to look at, fail to see anything accurately.
